Health Inequities and Social Justice Symposium
Maysa Shakibnia
Malinda Shell, MS

Main Goals
- Create awareness about the common health inequities of our society
- Address the root causes of health inequities
- Enable a more collaborative approach to action and research in inequalities in health and health service use at the community level

Why?
- Educate the campus community about the underlying causes of health inequality that creates conditions that their peers may be facing in today’s society and why these current conditions exist
- Alleviate the concept of blame and create a sense of awareness and compassion within our OSU community
- Address the magnitude of inequities in marginalized groups

What?
- A symposium that will include a range of topics such as food insecurity, sexual health, disabilities, chronic diseases, access to affordable health services, and violence against marginalized populations

Where?
- Memorial Union, Oregon State University Campus

When?
- Tuesday, April 14th and Wednesday, 15th

How?
- Recognize and attend to the underlying causes of these inequities in order to undertake a broad-based approach to public health promotion and disease prevention that is inclusive and emphasizes social justice
- Create awareness among students about the health inequities

Tasks and Work:
- Organizing and facilitating one or more subcommittee meetings: logistics, marketing, speakers and conference planning
- Overseeing the work of one or more subcommittees
- Working with an organizer on all aspects of the symposium
- Assisting in the organizing of data and information regarding the symposium (speakers, partner contacts, etc...)
- Assisting in the management of the registration process of the conference
- Assisting in managing and updating symposium budget
- Assisting in facilitating communication with partners and potential partners

Who?
- OSU Students, faculty, staff, and community educators and health partners