CONFIDENTIALITY

Prior to disclosing information to any office, you can ask about that office's confidentiality requirements and limitations, if any. Many confidential offices may be required to report certain information to law enforcement or other agencies (see confidentiality exemptions below).

Student Health Services (SHS) *

No information about a student can be released to any third party without the student's permission to do so. With a student's consent, SHS may disclose information for the purposes of providing medical treatment and to bill the student's insurance company for services and treatment received.

Counseling and Psychological Services (CAPS) *

CAPS maintains confidential records of all contacts with clients. No identifying information about a student's contact with CAPS will be disclosed to anyone outside CAPS without the student's written authorization.

There are some legal confidentiality exemptions for both SHS and CAPS, as well as for many other confidential offices on and off campus. In these rare circumstances, providers may need to disclose information without the person's written consent:

- If the person states intent to harm self or someone else.
- If the person reports current abuse or neglect of a vulnerable adult or child.
- As a result of a court order or subpoena.

Additional confidentiality exemptions for SHS

- To verify to the university whether a student has completed all mandatory immunizations.
- Other instances required by law; for example, certain communicable diseases must be reported to the local County Health Department.

Additional confidentiality exemptions for CAPS

- When mental illness is used as a defense in a criminal or civil action.
